

Postdoctoral Scholar in Communication (JOB# 10820)
Arizona State University, 2014-2015

The Center for Strategic Communication (CSC) at Arizona State University invites applications for a Postdoctoral Scholar in Communication to support a sponsored research project on climate change and social unrest. Anticipated start date is August 2014.

This is a full-time, benefits-eligible, 9-month appointment for 2014-2015 academic year. Renewal is possible, contingent on additional funding by the sponsor and satisfactory job performance. Salary is $45,000-$50,000 per year, depending on qualifications, and support for travel to conferences will be available. The successful candidate is responsible for relocation and housing expenses.

For additional information and policies regarding postdoctoral scholars at ASU, please see: <http://provost.asu.edu/postdoc>.

The successful candidate will be expected to carry out the research plan and fulfill the goals established with their supervising faculty member, Dr. Steve Corman; assist the supervising faculty member and other Principal Investigators in fulfilling the requirements of the project in a timely manner; communicate regularly with the supervising faculty member and other members of the research team; and notify the faculty member of any change in research plans. For further information about the position, contact Professor Steve Corman at steve.corman@asu.edu.
